ARIZONA LAWMAN

WHEN Dade Walker and Larry Morgan walked into the saloon, everybody minded their manners. Here were two men who had the remarkable trait of making everybody see what's the right thing to do . . . and the strength to make them do it. These were the two best shots in the territory, the two best wranglers, the two best gamblers, and the two best friends the Arizona territory had ever seen. So it was no surprise to anybody on that Saturday afternoon when Dade and Larry walked into the Gold Nugget, arm in arm. But it was a surprise to see them step over to the nearest table and rest their chins in their hands and pay no attention to the misconduct of a couple of dudes in the corner.

The bartender was the first one to approach them with a cheery, "What'll ya have today, boys?" but he got no answer from the disconsolate cowpokes. A small group of other men got up to join the bartender and see if they could get to the bottom of the mystery.

"Whatsa matter with you fellas, anyway?" the bartender asked. The group leaned closer to the two men . . . but all they could hear was a large sigh. The spectators looked at each other, but their comments on the situation were interrupted by a shout from outdoors, and a lone rider galloped up to the Gold Nugget's doors, reined his cow-pony in with a jerk and before he dismounted, he shouted, "It's true, it's true . . . what we've all been waitin' fer. Arizona's a state!"

All the men in the saloon were gathered at the doors and windows to hear the news. And when the rider leaped from his horse and finally entered the swinging doors, they crowded around him eagerly. "What did ya say, Jeb?" Arizona . . . a state? How d'ya know?" Dozens of other questions were pressed on the eager messenger.

"Just heard the news in the new capital, and rode right over here to letcha all know. And you know what that means now, don'tcha? This will be a reg'lar town . . . a city . . . with a name . . . and a council . . . and a sheriff . . . and schools . . . and . . ."

"Now just whoa a minute," the bartender said. "Do you mean that all of us here in this settlement can be . . . uh, incorporated?"

"That's right," Jeb assented. "And we'd better get right to work electin' a town council."

The Faro table was quickly cleared, and chairs were spread all around it for the election. There was no need to deliberate too much. Milke, the bartender, was quickly elected Chairman because of his facility with mathematics and "addin' assents and liabilities." The doctor was a member, and so was Caleb, the biggest rancher in that part. When three other men were nominated and duly elected, the town's name was officially decided. It was to be Twin Buttes, in honor of the two distinctive peaks which towered over the village. Then the big question arose.

"The next thing on the docket, men," the new chairman-bartender announced gravely, "is to appoint a sheriff of this village. Who's it gonna be?"

Doc Hammer rose to his feet and spoke. "He should be firstly, the best shot in these parts. He should be able to ride the range with the best of 'em. He should be able to hold his own in . . ." And then he broke off suddenly with the bitter realization that not only one man in town would fill this difficult bill, but two men who were now sitting in that very bar!

"Dade," whispered the bartender, ". . . or Larry?" And this was the question in everyone's mind, as they glanced over to see again the almost-forgotten men who were still sitting sadly at the table.

Finally Dade looked up, his first recognition of the newly-elected body of men. "We knew it," he said quietly. "And we also knew that either Larry or me were the only two men who could qualify as sheriff." In the silence that followed, Larry added, "Ya all know that we both been enforcin' the law here ever since there were more than three families around here. Ya also know that folks won't pay any attention to just one of us, and the first ranny that rides through these parts will aways be on the lookout to bushwhack one of us. If Larry here were made sheriff, I'd be havin' to tend to muh chores on the ranch, and couldn't be around to keep muh eye on him too good."

"And that goes double for

INSTANT LIVE SEA ANIMALS

just add water... you've got INSTANT LIFE

It's true. Now, right before your eyes — in just 24-72 hours — a happy troupe of hundreds of playful tumbling sea-monkeys (exotic Saskatchewan Brine Shrimp) that are more fun than a sea full of seals. Amaze both children and adults as you watch the comic antics of these fantastic underwater sea clowns. Day and night you'll see them chase each other in a playful game of hide and seek. The loser gets caught by the tail and is spun in a dizzy circle. See the "showoffs" turn somersaults under water... see the ticklish ones scratch each others' backs. Watch them cavort singly or glide gracefully in formation creating your own underwater circus.

MIRACLE OF LIFE

Right before your eyes these genuine live sea animals burst forth from "magic" powder eggs which will remain alive as long as eight years. You can raise an entire troupe in an ordinary glass jar using just tap water. It's so easy... just empty the package into a jar or fish bowl, add water and you have created "instant life." You can have a whole sea brood to give as gifts or sell if you wish.

SEE THEM OBEY YOUR SILENT COMMANDS

Darken the room and watch them follow a flashlight or candle beam forwards, backwards, sideways or around like a pack of happy kids playing follow the leader. Order now.

ONLY
$1.00

SEE THEM CHANGE COLOR

Mail this coupon and we'll send you 3 colors of sea-monkeys — white, pink and red. These are their natural colors. Yet, with a drop of vegetable food dye in their water, you can change the color of these little sea monkeys as often as you wish. Make them green, blue, purple, yellow or any other hue or shade without harming them. This dye will enable you to see their internal organs and how their life processes function.

me," Larry added regretfully.

After thinking it over for a while, Mike turned to the new council. "He's right, men. We all know that Dade and Larry are a team, and they work as a team. If we really wanna keep this town clean, we're gonna have to have 'em both!"

Dade and Larry turned back to staring at the worn table top, and all was quiet, until the Doctor spoke again.

"I suggest that we all adjourn to my back room where we can discuss this subject further." The five officials got up from the table and slowly filed out the doors.

After a few minutes more, Dade and Larry looked at each other, then got up and left the table. They strode down the wooden walk, then Larry turned around and looked down the now-deserted main street beyond to the blue peaks in the background. "Twin Buttes," he mused. "That's a right purty name for a town!"

If the two men had stayed a few minutes longer, they would have seen a rider come out of the back entrance of the doctor's house, mount his horse, and ride away quickly in the direction of the new State capital. As he passed the corner of the house, there was a joyful smile on his face.

The sun had just sunk below the twin buttes, when that same rider returned from his mission, dismounted and re-entered the doctor's door. The news went out to all the townspeople within the hour to gather at the Gold Nugget Saloon at 7:00 sharp for the first town meeting. And the biggest news on the program that night was going to be the announcement of the new sheriff.

At first neither Dade nor Larry were going to attend, until Jeb came out to the ranch requesting both of them to be sure to be there.

"That's sure 'nuff foolishness," Larry confided to Dade, "but we'll come."

And at seven o'clock sharp, the whole town showed up at the Gold Nugget, and refreshments were served on the house in celebration of the great event. When the gavel that Mike wielded finally came down on the bar and called the meeting to order, most of the men in the group felt obviously uncomfortable. And the arrival of both Morgan and Walker didn't calm the atmosphere. The expressions on the members of the council, however, were jubilant... and Mike opened his remarks with, "Now ya all know how hard it was to pick our man!" An assenting murmur ran through the spectators. He continued, "It was just well-nigh impossible to pick just one of these two men, and there just warn't nobody else to pick!" Another rumble of approval was heard.

While Walker and Morgan stood there uncomfortably, a man in the back row suddenly stood and shouted, "Get on with it, Mike. Who'd ya finally pick?"

Mike smiled then as he unrolled a parchment declaration from the State capital. "Wal now, I reckon these little pieces of paper will clear the whole thing up. Ya see, everybody knows that we can't have two sheriffs in one town... but there ain't nothin' to prevent havin' two sheriffs for two towns!"

The crowd sat in silence until Mike went on. "Jeb here, rode into the capital this afternoon with the message about what the name of the place was gonna be. Only instead of 'puttin' Twin Buttes on the paper, we figured we'd split the town right down the middle of the main street and make everything on the north side one town, and everything on the south side an entirely different town! Therefore, friends, I've come to welcome you to the first joint meeting of our two little villages!"

When the words of the chairman finally sunk into the crowd, a roar of approval and satisfaction went up. Every man turned back to look at Walker and Morgan, and as they did, Mike signaled for them to come up to the front of the room. As the two men approached, they could see that Mike was holding two silver stars, each with the words "sheriff" inscribed on them. "Dade Walker," he said, as the crowd grew hushed, "I hereby appoint you a sheriff of our northern town which has been given the name of Walkerville."

He turned to Larry then and smiled. "And you're our southern sheriff, Larry, and mind you keep your city of Morgantown a law-abidin' one!"

And amid all the celebration that night, not a shot was fired, 'cause everybody knew that you just couldn't beat that law-enforcin' team of Walker and Morgan! THE END F-751
